

ENGLISH SUMMARIES

- Gościwit Malinowski, Agnieszka Kotlińska-Toma, Emilia Żybert-Pruchnicka: Professor Janina Ławińska-Tyszkowska (1934–2013) as Remembered by Her Disciples 3
 Janina Ławińska-Tyszkowska’s disciples, and later colleagues, present their memories of that eminent Greek scholar and professor of the University of Wrocław, who translated into Polish, among other works, all of Aristophanes’ comedies and Herondas’ mimes.
- Anna Zawadzka: Obituary of Professor Jerzy Kolendo (1933–2014) 13
 The late Jerzy Kolendo, professor of the University of Warsaw, concentrated his research on the ancient history of Rome and of the territories belonging now to Poland. He also investigated contacts between the Mediterranean world and the Barbaricum. Being a man of immense knowledge, he willingly helped his students and colleagues.
- Katarzyna Pietruczuk: Letters in Euripides’ Tragedies 27
 The article analyses the function of letters in Euripides’ plays, showing how the use of a letter can help the playwright to limit the action to one day and one place.
- Diogenes Laertius: Epigrams on the Presocratics 45
 Diogenes Laertius’ seven epigrams on Thales of Miletus, Heraclitus of Ephesus, Anaxagoras of Clazomenae, Zeno of Elea, Protagoras of Abdera, Philolaus of Croton and Democritus of Abdera are printed here in Maria Marcinkowska-Rosół’s and Rafał Rosół’s translation, with an introduction and notes.
- Agnieszka Wąsik: The Chapters on Red and Purple Gems in Isidore’s Etymologies 57
 Two chapters of Isidore’s Etymologies (XVI 8–9) are printed here in Agnieszka Wąsik’s Polish translation, with an introduction and notes.

Jakub Filonik: Athenian Impiety Trials till 399 BCE. An Attempt at Analysis	65
The present discussion aims to analyse references concerning Athenian impiety trials in the fifth century BCE up to the well-attested trial of Socrates in 399 BCE. First, it argues that some of the trials must have then been an invention of Hellenistic and later biographers. Second, it analyses the socio-political context of those trials which can be deemed historical. Third, it discusses in detail legal issues connected with such accusations. Overall, it seeks to provide a brief but possibly comprehensive study of Athenian impiety trials in the fifth century BCE, with an article on later trials to follow in one of the next issues of the journal.
Paweł Sawiński: Triumphal and Honorific Arches as an Homage to Members of the Emperors' Families During the Principate of Augustus and Tiberius . .	109
The paper analyses the evidence concerning arches erected in honour of the emperors' closest relatives during the reign of the two first principes.
Anna Lewartowicz: "Przegląd Klasyczny"	141
The monthly "Przegląd Klasyczny" ("The Classical Review") was published in Lwów (now Lviv in Ukraine) in the years 1935–1939. The article presents an overview of its contents, its editors and its character in the context of other similar periodicals published in Poland at that time.
Bartosz Awianowicz: Quintilian's Five Books in Polish.	163
A review of Stanisław Śnieżewski's translation of Quint. Inst. VIII 6 – XII.
Maciej Maciejowski: The Sertorian War.	173
A review of Tomasz Ładoń's book on the war between the armies of Sertorius and Sulla (80–71 BC).
Barbara Bibik: Lullaby	181
A review of the play Medea by Kate Mulvany and Anne-Louise Sarks, staged by Dorota Kędzierzawska in the theatre Polonia in Warsaw.
Agata Łuka: A „Translation” of Ovid (Amores I 9)	185
A free and jocular retelling of Ovid's elegy on the analogies of love and warfare.
Kajetan Poznański: Hannibal Lecter's Banquet	187
A poem imitating Horace's Epodes in its style and metre. Its lyrical subject is borrowed from Thomas Harris' novels and the films based on them.	